THE FIRST PRINTING IN ALBERTA

HE FIRST PRINTING PRESS to come into the great Province of Alberta was carted to Edmonton in the early winter of 1880 by Hon. Frank Oliver, a pioneer who is still rendering service to the Dominion on the Board of Railway Comissioners. The press, type, and a small supply of paper was transported from Winnipeg in an ox-cart, the railroad, at the time, having not penetrated that far into the west.

On December 6, 1880, appeared the first product of that press—the initial number of The Bulletin. I have seen a great many pioneer newspapers, but this one holds the palm as the smallest known paper of serious intent, issued regularly. The page size was five and onequarter by six and one-half inches. There were four pages to the issue and two columns to the page.

According to the statement in the masthead, this diminutive newspaper was published by 'Taylor & Oliver, Proprietors." It is stated that "The Bulletin will be published every Monday morning from the 1st of December until the 1st of May. Subscriptions for the season, $2.00. Season advertisements, $5.00 per inch. Transient advertisements, 10 per line each insertion. Business cards not over four lines, $2.50. Payments strictly in advance. Notices of births, marriages and deaths free. - Taylor & Oliver, Proprietors." Under the heading "About Ourselves," there follows the publishers' salutatory, which read as follows: "Last winter, after the telegraph line had been extended to Edmonton and an office established, an arrangement was made by which a weekly bulletin was sent over the line, so that the people here might be informed at the earliest possible date of whatever notable events were transpiring at the time in the world at large. But this plan was found to be expensive to a few and, for various reasons, unsatisfactory to all. It was thought to be a better plan to have the bulletin printed so that every subscriber to the fund could be supplied with a copy. To this end a small press and a quantity of printing material has been procured, a special correspondent has been engaged in Winnipeg, and every Monday morning, from this issue until the 1st of May, we will issue a small sheet in newspaper form, which will contain a bulletin, giving the most notable occurances [sic] in the world at large and matters concerning the Northwest Territories in particular, local news from all parts of the Upper Saskatchewan country, opinions on matters and things connected with the Northwest, and a synopsis of the news brought in by the previous mail."

In answer to some queries submitted by me, Hon. Frank Oliver has been kind enough to give me some specific information regarding the plant at which The Bulletin was printed during this first winter. The press was a toy "model" manufactured in Philadelphia. Both type and press were purchased in Winnipeg. The type-setting equipment consisted of "one pair of cases of lean nonpareil." Inking was done by hand.

The supply of paper was purchased from the Winnipeg Free Press and cut to size in that office. A supply for six months at least had to be taken to Edmonton, as freighting by oxen was cut off in winter.

There were two hundred subscribers to the first volume for the six months' period of publication. Publication was suspended in the summer while Mr. Oliver was away on a trip to Winnipeg. Advertising revenue was negligible for this first volume.

There is here shown the first page of the seccond issue of The Bulletin in the same size as the original, reproduced from the file in the Manitoba Provincial Library. The first issue is present in that file, but it is a little too faded for satisfactory reproduction. This set of the first volume of The Bulletin was acquired a number of years ago for the extravagant price of ten dollars!

During the summer of 1881 publication was suspended, but on October 29 of that year appeared Vol. II, No. 1, of the Edmonton Bulletin. The newspaper had been enlarged to a page size of six and one-half by nine and one-half inches, with three columns to the page. Oliver and Dunlop were listed as proprietors, and it was noted that communications should be addressed to Frank Oliver, Edmonton, or A. Dunlop, Winnipeg.

The subscription rate was the same as the preceeding season and the advertising scale approximately similar. In the masthead was the reminder: "Job work done neatly, quickly and cheaply at The Bulletin office." In resuming publication the editor had this message for his readers: "According to our promise of last spring we issue The Bulletin in an enlarged form, and, we hope, with an improved appearance. No effort will be spared to keep our readers posted on all that is transpiring in the Upper Saskatchewan country. While our telegrams will give all important items of general news, special attention will be paid to matters relating to the North-West. Our opinions in regard to subjects that may claim our attention will be expressed truthfully and fearlessly, with a single eye to the best interests of this western country. At present we have only arranged to publish during the winter, but, if sufficient support is received, the paper will be continued without interruption and made a permanent institution."

The publication of a newspaper was not the exclusive business of Frank Oliver, for we find him advertising, from his store on Main Street that he "has on hand a good stock of groceries, hardware, boots and shoes, for sale at lowest prices. Farm produce taken at cash prices."

As is well known, the Edmonton Bulletin is now one of the most enterprising and prosperous journals in the western provinces.
